BENGALI

The People’s Republic of Bangladesh is located in South Asia. It is situated between India and Myanmar (Burma) with the Bay of Bengal at its southern border.

The official languages of Bangladesh include Bengali, also known as Bangla, and English. Bengali also has official language status in India and is spoken by 8.1% of the population, primarily in the Indian state of West Bengal.

Please see the following chart for pertinent information on the country of Bangladesh.

There are two standard written forms of Bengali:
- Shadhubasha - an elegant and genteel form of writing used in literary works, and
- Chalitbhasa - a more current style of writing that reflects colloquial language.

Today, both spoken and written Bengali are modeled on Chalitbhasa and are used in daily communication. Most Bengali speakers are fluent in Chalitbhasa as well as the regional dialect of the community in which they live. It is important to note that Chalitbhasa is also the form of the Bengali language used in the media.

Some interesting features of the Bengali language are:

- The Bengali alphabet is a syllabic alphabet that uses symbols for consonants and vowels and diacritic marks.
- The Bengali alphabet consists of eleven vowels, thirty-five consonants and eleven vowel diacritics.
- Bengali is written from left to right and from top to bottom.
- There is no differentiation between upper and lowercase.

Note to Teachers: Bengali word order follows the pattern of subject/object/verb and the negative is placed at the end of the sentence. Please be aware that these linguistic differences may cause confusion for your Bengali students who are learning English.

BENGALI BILINGUAL PROGRAMS IN NEW YORK CITY

• John Adams High School

Over the past few years, a large number of Bengali immigrants have relocated to the Ozone Park area of Queens due to changes in the economic environment and property value factors. To respond to the needs of this new community, John Adams High School has established a Bengali bilingual program, staffed by four dedicated Bengali bilingual teachers, to educate these youngsters who have relocated with their families. One hundred fifty (150) students are currently enrolled in the bilingual program.

The bilingual program provides instruction in native language arts, English language arts, English as a second language, mathematics, science and social studies. Native language arts instruction is differentiated to address students’ needs. Instructional materials and resources from Bangladesh are adapted and utilized in the classroom to continue to develop students’ proficiency in the Bengali language. The writing process is taught in both the Bengali and English language arts classes. The intent is to help students bridge the language gap and transfer their native language knowledge and skills to English.

The subject areas of Mathematics, Living Environment and Global History are taught in English with native language support. Teachers utilize the English-Bengali subject area glossaries, as well as bilingual and native language dictionaries, to help students comprehend the new subject area material. After school tutoring programs in Global History and Living Environment provide additional support for students. In addition, The South Asian Club provides students with the opportunity to socialize with one another and learn together.

• Family

Here are some interesting facts about family life in Bangladesh:

- The extended family, chula, is the basic social unit in rural Bangladesh.
- Members of the extended family work jointly owned lands.
- Food is prepared and shared with all extended family members, usually from a common kitchen.
- One or more of the extended family units form a bari.
- Married sons usually live in their father’s household. However, when the father dies, the sons separate and form their own households within the bari.
- Married sons submit to their father’s authority, while daughters submit to the mother-in-law’s authority.

• Cultural Dos and Don’ts

- Do...
  - …bring pastries or candy, especially chocolates, when visiting someone’s home.
  - …offer your gift with two hands.
…take a seat when invited to do so because it is considered improper for a visitor to sit on the floor or ground. If a chair is not available, a low stool or bamboo mat will be provided by the host.

…pass dishes, eat and drink with the right hand because the left hand is considered unclean.

❖ Don’t

…give money as a gift
…open a gift in front of the giver because it is considered bad manners to do so.
... start to eat until the eldest person at the table begins eating.
…kiss or hug in public.

• Calendar

Both the Gregorian and the Bengali calendar are used in Bangladesh. The Bengali Calendar is a solar calendar. It is comprised of twelve months organized into six seasons. The Bengali calendar is used to mark the holidays that are specific to the Bengali culture as well as the beginning and ending dates of the six seasons. Some interesting facts about this calendar follow.

❖ The Bengali New Year, Poyela Boishakh, is celebrated on the 14th of April.
❖ The six seasons of the Bengali year are: Summer, Rainy or Monsoon, Autumn, Dry, Winter and Spring.
❖ The Bengali day begins and ends at sunrise. There are seven days in a week and three hundred sixty five days in a year. The first five months of the year are comprised of thirty one days, while the remaining seven months are comprised of thirty days.
❖ An additional day is added to the month of Falgun (February-March) in each leap year of the Gregorian calendar.
