FOOD-GE.2191 Food and Culture
Mon, Tues, Wed, Thurs 2:00-4:40

Course Description and Objectives

In Food and Culture we will determine how people use food to define themselves as individuals, groups or whole societies. We will identify the meaning and significance of food in different cultures by exploring the way that ethnicity, gender, socioeconomic status and religion influence our food choices or preferences. Additionally, we will examine how culture is transmitted and preserved through food. Through reading scholarly articles, personal essays, book excerpts, newspaper articles and cookbooks we will explore the intricate relationship that people have with food.

We will look critically at the following questions: how can food have different meanings and uses for different people? How does food function both to foster community feeling and drive wedges among people? What are some prevailing academic theories that help us identify and understand more subtle meanings of food?

Learning Objectives:

By the end of this course students should be able to:

1. Describe major academic theories about the relationship between food and identity.
2. Analyze how individual and collective identities are asserted and represented in the realm of food practices and in the media.
3. Compare and contrast processes of food-based identity as they have developed around nation, region, religion, race and ethnicity.
4. Identify and explain stereotypes and archetypes about another through their food.
5. Contrast insider and outsider modes of identity claims and assignment.
6. Explain why and how people fight over food, and why disgust is often gustatory.
7. Elaborate on the mutual constitution of the self and the other, along with the love, longing and disdain for the other's food.

SHORT final paper presentations

 Papers due Friday, MARCH 1, 2013 *****

Research Paper and Presentations

An independent 15-20 page research paper of your choice, accompanied by an 8 minute oral presentation is the culminating project for Food and Culture. You may choose a topic that we are exploring in class, or an area of personal or academic interest. A brief list of the types of topics appropriate are:

- . Exploring a particular ethnic group's foodways.
- . Specific religious practices and food
- . Wonder Bread as an American phenomenon
- . An in depth study of a food event or festival
- . An ethnographic study of a soup kitchen
- . A literary analysis of food related novels or films
- . The sociological movement of vegans
- . Cultural identity through street food
- . Power and chefs
- . Cultural significance of medieval fasts and feasts
- . A study of a Korean family's acculturation and resistance through food
- . Technology's role in "Americanizing" an ethnic cuisine
- . Masculine meat, and feminine field greens

These topics are merely meant to give you an idea of the vast possibilities. Whatever topic you select, it must be original. By this, I mean that you may not select a topic that you are using, or have previously used for another class. Try to select a topic as soon as possible, and make an appointment to meet with me and discuss your ideas.

The Paper

Please type, double space and staple your 15-20 page paper. Please use either 10 or 12 point font only. It must have a title that accurately defines your paper. You must have a clearly stated thesis, and focus the entire paper around it. Provide specific examples to support this thesis. Select other studies, or scholarly articles to use as models. For example, if you are doing a study on female roles in Ethiopian festival cooking, look for studies that also focus on gender roles or festival food preparations. It is important that you incorporate other academic studies into your project. I am not however, just looking for a related literature review. You must not just cite these projects, but frame them, or compare them to your study in some way.

I suggest beginning with a thorough search in the library, for any and all material related to your topic of interest. You may use Bobcat, or other ONLINE searches. The reference librarians at Bobst are extremely helpful. Do not be afraid to use other libraries as well. The research library at the NYPL is perhaps the finest in the world. Explore the Internet, newspaper articles, journals, live interviews, participate in an actual event or situation, or consult archives. All information is helpful. You must use at least ten scholarly references (journals or books). Additionally, you may use newspapers, popular magazines, cookbooks, trade publications, films, surveys, pamphlets, labels, etc. Strong research papers combine both primary and secondary sources.

It is understood that the paper must be free of typographical and grammatical errors. I strongly urge even the most accomplished writers to seek advice from the Writing Center. Make your appointments early, as they book up quickly. Check the rules of plagiarism. Cite all original quotes and paraphrased information. Any academic style is acceptable. However, make sure that you consult a style manual for the exact way to reference materials. Staple your paper (no binders please) and include a title page. You may use footnotes OR endnotes, but either way, your paper MUST have a separate bibliography. The paper is due Friday, February 1, 2013. Late papers will receive a drop in grade. Additionally, you need to email me a copy of your paper.

A 5- page rough draft of your paper is due on Wednesday, January 23 in class. I am unable to accept drafts after January 23.

Grading Criteria

Participation: discussion and attendance	40%
Research paper and presentation	60%
TOTAL	100%

Participation involves coming to class, completing all of the required readings and active participation in lecture and discussion. The richness of our discussions requires involvement from everyone. Your thoughts and opinions matter.
