

Application for Undergraduate Honors in Media, Culture, and Communication

The Media, Culture, and Communication Honors Program is comprised of three basic components: a minimum GPA to participate, a seminar dedicated to honors research, and a thesis, advised by a faculty member.

Students enrolling in the honors program will register for the 2-credit course, Senior Honors Seminar in Media, Culture, and Communication, MCC-UE 1210.001 in the fall of their senior year, and for 2 credits of independent study with their faculty sponsor in the spring of their senior year. With advisor approval, these four honors credits can either count towards one of your fields of study, as a restricted elective, or as an unrestricted elective. Enrollment in honors is limited, and the faculty committee on honors will review applications and notify applicants of permission to enroll prior to spring registration. Please review requirements for the Honors Program in Media, Culture, and Communication with your advisor.
